

TRAIL OF AUTO THIEVES SAID TO LEAD TO DIXON

MRS. LELAND
IN SUPREME COURT TODAYTimidly Appeared to Answer Questions,
She Declared

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 16—(AP)—Less than a hundred words were spoken by Mrs. Charlotte C. Leland before the supreme court this morning. Chief Justice Dunn called her after lawyers representing her divorced husband and Dr. Carl Case, preacher correspondent, had argued and told her the court could not hear witnesses, but only lawyers.

"Mrs. Leland," the chief justice called, and she rose to her feet. "Do you wish to argue for a reversal of this decree?"

She started to answer. "Come closer," the justice said, "I can't hear you."

She approached and started to say that she wanted merely to explain to the court why she was there.

Claimed No Error

"You appear," the justice interferred, "as a plaintiff in error. You have assigned no error. There has been a severance. That means you have stepped out of the case, as satisfied with the decree. You claim no error, so you have no right to argue. Mr. Leland is the only one who might argue for a reversal, but he does not want to."

"You cannot argue for an affirmation. He can argue that but you cannot. You are not an attorney. We hear only technical arguments such as lawyers make, but we hear no witnesses. We don't hear the witnesses on the other side, so we can't hear you. Your brief is before the court and it will be considered, but you can't be heard in argument."

"Please may I say why I'm here," she asked.

"Well," the justice answered, "we'll hear you briefly."

To Answer Questions

"I only came here to answer questions," Mrs. Leland said, "if you should care to ask any. The other lawyers said there had been no evidence of some things, and I wanted to be here to give it."

With that, Mrs. Leland turned back to her seat where she had listened to Frederick A. Brown, attorney for Dr. Carl Case, the retired Baptist minister, describe her a woman "troubled with hallucinations as many women of her age are, at the climacteric of life." Mr. Brown said there was no precedent for his action in asking a reversal of the appellate court's decree of divorce.

"We are attacking the confession this woman made as poor, naked and unsupported. There was not one witness to any of her charges, never a human being who saw them on a walk in the park, or even a letter from him, absolutely nothing."

Finally, as if she felt her welcome certain, Mrs. Leland appeared in the court to plead with the seven black robed justices for a decision that will give her children a heritage of "fidelity" rather than "insanity."

She left her train early and got to the supreme court building and left immediately, wandering then about the capital grounds. At 3:45 o'clock, she returned to the office, arriving there while the lawyers for the preacher in the case, Dr. Carl Case, were signing their names on the clerk's roll for oral argument.

Hesitated at Door

Recognizing them from the door, Mrs. Leland walked directly by, and stopped hesitatingly at the back stairway which leads to the supreme court room.

She was evidently very nervous and seemed, as she stood in the stair corner, as a hare cornered by hounds and unable to escape.

She waited till spectators had disappeared and the two lawyers for Doctor Case had left the office of Charles Vail, the supreme court clerk, and then walked in.

She greeted Robert Conn, the assistant clerk, with a smile and said she was Mrs. Leland. He pointed to the line for her signature and told her that the case was the third up for argument this morning. She signed in pencil "Charlotte C. Leland" and then walked from the room and up the stair.

She stopped again at the door of the court room than walked in to a seat in the farthest row from the bench. She sat there with downcast eyes, attempting to avoid the interest eyes occasioned. She was dressed very simply, almost poorly, in dark brown with a small fur about her neck.

Said She Had No Fear

Mrs. Leland approached the court room timidly, but occupied herself after finding a seat in the rear of the room, in making notes. She told reporters she had no fear, but did not regard the ordeal with any pleasure.

NEW PASTOR DIXON
BAPTIST CHURCH IS COMING NEXT MO.Rev. W. W. Marshall of Cambridge Accepts
Call of Church

Rev. W. W. Marshall, pastor of the Baptist church at Cambridge, Ill., has accepted the call of the First Baptist church of this city to become its pastor, and he will take up his work here early next month. Concerning his removal to this city, the Cambridge correspondent of the Moline Dispatch says:

Cambridge—The Rev. W. W. Marshall of the Cambridge Baptist church has accepted the call of the First Baptist church of this city to become its pastor, and he will take up his work here early next month. Concerning his removal to this city, the Cambridge correspondent of the Moline Dispatch says:

Although his intention of resigning was not announced until yesterday, members of his congregation had expected such action on his part and prepared a petition, bearing signatures of almost every member of the church, asking him to remain. The petition, which says his work in Cambridge has been unusually good and asks him to reconsider any plans he has made, was presented to him shortly before he handed in his resignation.

In Cambridge Two Years

The Rev. Mr. Marshall came to Cambridge two years ago. It was his first pastorate in this country as he came to the United States from England in October, 1923. He was superintendent of the mission for sailors in Wales, England. He was engaged in that work for fourteen years and served as a navy chaplain with the British navy during the World war. Several other missions were under his command.

During the recent World war his work was so strenuous that he was forced to give it up as soon as the greater part of the restoration work was completed. He came to the United States and sought a pulpit in a small city where his duties would not be quite so strenuous.

"I have enjoyed myself very much in Cambridge," he said yesterday. "Cambridge people, especially the Baptist congregation, have been very kind and nice to me and it is with regret that I leave them."

First Sermon Nov. 8

He will leave Cambridge November 2 after preaching a farewell sermon November 1 and receiving seven into the church. He will preach his first sermon in the Dixon church as its pastor November 8. Official announcement of his resignation will be made at morning worship Sunday.

The First Baptist church at Dixon is the only Baptist church for white people there. There is the Second Baptist church which is for colored people. The Dixon church was at one time the sixth largest Baptist church in Illinois. It has lost its high standing during recent years and the Rev. Mr. Marshall's aim will be to restore it to its former high rank.

Mrs. Marshall and the two children Ruth and Leslie, will accompany him there. He has made three visits to Dixon lately and is convinced he will like the city. He has many friends in his three visits.

Dixon Man on Freeport

This year's session will witness the presentation of the Twenty seventh degree, which entails the services of a large cast and will be given on the closing day of the reunion.

PRIZE WINNERS IN CONTEST OF
ESSAY WRITERSFine Interest Shown by Dixon Pupils in New Industries Papers

The judges in the high school student essay contest, which was recently conducted by the New Industries Committee of the Dixon Chamber of Commerce on the theme, "Why More Industries Should Locate in My Home Town," have finished grading the papers submitted and have announced the winners of the 19 prizes which were offered in recognition of the efforts and as awards of merit to the local students.

These prizes were co-operatively contributed by various Dixon business concerns to further stimulate the interest among the students. Practically a universal response resulted, over 600 essays having been submitted. On the whole they showed careful analysis of the many advantages and assets possessed by Dixon for the location of new industries here, and were of such excellence as to make their comparative judging difficult.

The contest has been valuable because it necessitated a survey which required thought of and directed attention to Dixon and its attributes, and has stimulated not only the students but those in close contact with them to look and see Dixon as Dixon really is, with the result of more greatly, "selling Dixon to Dixon residents."

List of Prize Winners

REVOLVER SAID TO HAVE FIGURED IN
GRAVEL PIT FIGHTSam Fletcher Arrested
Last Night After Alleged Brawl

Sam Fletcher, said to operate one of the most notorious places in the city at 1835 West First Street, was arrested last night and placed in a cell at the county jail on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, which charge was made by Harry Bolt-house, a farmer residing east of the city near the Kingdom. The complaint followed an alleged drunken brawl which it was said, was staged in the gravel pit on West Third street, after a drinking party at Fletcher's resort and in which "Kid" Pierce is said to have received a severe trouncing at the hands of Eugene Osborne.

Bothouse, Osborne and Mike Schmidt went to the police station last evening about 6 o'clock and complained that Fletcher had fired shots at them near the Byrd gravel pit on West Third street. Bothouse was the chief complainant and told his story of the affair to State's Attorney Mark J. Keller.

Said He Bought Liquor

He stated that he had purchased three drinks of liquor at Fletcher's home during the early evening, for which he paid 25 cents apiece and said Fletcher gave him one, making four in all. Names of several others who were in the place drinking were also mentioned. During the drinking "Kid" Pierce and Eugene Osborne engaged in an argument and according to the story, the latter and Bothouse were ordered out of the house and off the property. Osborne went to a nearby store and purchased a package of cigarettes for Mike Schmidt, and with Bothouse returned to the scene of the argument.

Osborne demanded that Fletcher produce Pierce that the two men might settle their difficulties finally. By agreement, all parties are alleged to have gone in automobiles to the Byrd gravel pit on West Third street, where it is said Pierce received a beating.

Said He Pulled Gun

While the battle was in progress, according to the story told the state's attorney, Fletcher, seeing that his friend was getting the worst of it chose to interfere, whereupon Bothouse sought to take a hand in the affair and permit the two batters to settle their difficulties. This enraged Fletcher, who whipped a revolver from his pocket and pointed it at Bothouse he said. According to the latter's version of the affair, Fletcher's daughter who had accompanied the men to the scene of the battle, struck her father's arm as he was about to pull the trigger. Schmidt, Bothouse and Osborne leaped into a car and rushed to the police station where they related their story and Bothouse swore out a warrant for Fletcher's arrest.

Fletcher was arrested at his home last evening about 7:30 and taken direct to the county jail. Local authorities are conducting a further investigation today and it was quite probable that several parties whose names were furnished the state's attorney, as having been drinking at Fletcher's resort during the late afternoon, might be called in for questioning.

The Fletcher place, according to local officers, has been the source of much complaint for some time and is said to have been one of the worst places of its kind in the city or near vicinity.

When assigned before Justice Grover W. Gehart this morning on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, Fletcher was released on bonds of $500 which were furnished by his attorney, John E. Erwin. The case was continued until next Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

THREE ARRESTED IN SLAYING TWO
AT KENOSHA, WIS.Seek Solution Murder
Young Woman and Her Intended

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 16—(AP)—Declaring he can prove he was at home in bed at the time of the crime, Howard J. Pratt, a motorman on the North Shore Electric Railway, held in connection with the slaying of Madalynne Latimer, of Milwaukee, and her fiancée, James Sears of this city, today denied any knowledge of the crime.

Pratt, a former author of the slain girl, is the man, according to Evelyn Latimer, twin sister of Madalynne who made a threat against the pair. Pratt was arrested in Milwaukee last night as he returned to his home there. The time of the killing is set at 1 a. m., on Thursday by Christ Birch, a farmer, who said he was awakened by shots at that hour.

To Have Been Married

Miss Latimer and Sears were to have been married on New Year's day, members of the girl's family said today. She frequently visited Kenosha and spent most of her time at the home of Carl Sears, a brother of the slain youth.

The pair were seen leaving Kenosha about 10:30 p. m. Wednesday night. Later a party of young people returning to Kenosha saw Sears' car parked near the point where the bodies were found. They said they recognized Sears and Miss Latimer in the machine. The young people are the last who saw the pair alive.

Sheriff Willems disclosed today that the authorities are holding a small coupe which is owned by Pratt. The machine was found in Kenosha and gives molar to information to police that Sears' car was followed by a coupe answering the description of that owned by Pratt, as he left town the night he was killed. Nothing has developed however, police say, to lead to the identity of the person driving the coupe and it might have been any one of a number of cars.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 16—(AP)—The first arrest in the hunt for the slayer of Madalynne Latimer, 19 year old Milwaukee girl, and her fiancée, James Sears, Kenosha, whose bodies were found in a field near Kenosha early yesterday, was made at midnight when Milwaukee and Kenosha deputies took Howard J. Pratt of Milwaukee into custody. The deputies said they thought Pratt could throw some light on the case.

Pratt was arrested as he entered his home here. Deputies lay in wait for him for several hours. Pratt is a conductor on the North Shore Electric Railway.

Early today two young men were taken into custody by Sheriff Willems who refused to divulge their names. He said, however, that both had been paying attentions to Miss Latimer within a year and that one of them is married.

ACCUSED "BABY
FARM" OPERATOR
NOT STERLINGITE

Man Accused in Milwaukee Gave Sterling as His Home

Investigation conducted by the Sterling authorities has failed to disclose that Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder, who gave that city as their home address when arrested in Milwaukee yesterday on a charge of operating a "baby farm" without a license, ever lived in that city.

The warrants were issued at the instigation of the Milwaukee health department, when nurses reported that the seven dependent children housed in the Snyder home were not receiving proper care and education, and that the environment was bad. The Snyder home was operated under the name of Volunteer Rescue Army Day Nursery and Rescue Home.

A report from Sterling is to the effect that Snyder was in charge of the Volunteer Army's Rescue Home in Chicago until it was abandoned some time ago, and from there he went to Joliet. Why he should have given Sterling as his home is not known, unless it was because there are four Sterling children in his home, children of widowed mothers who are unable to care for them.

Lead to Investigation of Thefts

(Telegraph Special Service)

DeKalb, Oct. 16—Operations of a gang of automobile thieves, whose caches of stolen cars are believed to have been made in Dixon, Mendota and other cities in this section, are thought near disclosure as the result of the arrest of F. E. Cooper, aged about 35, of Chicago, who is alleged to have stolen several cars in Chicago recently and to have delivered them to three young men in this city, who later sold them to people in DeKalb and other cities.

Cooper was arrested in Chicago Thursday afternoon at the instigation of the DeKalb police department, which secured the information implicating him.

Warrants For Three

The three young men in this city alleged to have been implicated in the theft of at least six cars are Albert M. Andrews, about 19 years of age, Eddie Conlin, age about 21, and Walter Whyte, who is also in his twenties. Conlin and Andrews have been in the custody of the DeKalb police since Sunday night and are being held at the DeKalb police station until warrants arrive from Chicago, charging them with having and receiving stolen property.

Sunday Officer Frank Riddell and State Patrol Officer Oscar Larson went to Chicago in search of F. E. Cooper, alias F. E. Colter, as he was known by Andrews, Whyte and Conlin. They were accompanied by Walter Whyte, who knew Cooper and could identify him. Although they visited his haunts in Chicago, they failed to locate him and the aid of the Chicago detective bureau was secured. Three Chicago detectives arrived in this city shortly before noon today.

A great deal of trouble with speaking through a telephone is caused by not knowing how to talk through it. Not more than one in ten knows how to talk through a telephone. Some yell, some whisper, some put their faces against the receiver and still others hold it at arms length. If a happy medium were used there would not be the slightest trouble. A moderate voice and plainly spoken words, not too fast, will bring results every time. —Sycamore Tribune.

MRS. LELAND IN SUPREME COURT TODAY

ure. She reaffirmed her confession, declaring Dr. Case had lied when he described her as "insane." She said she had trusted him, and for him had been unfaithful to her marriage vows, but her own husband's trust in her finally induced her confession.

Two lawyers for Doctor Case were to seek a reversal of the divorce, which was granted by the appellate court after the superior court in Chicago had refused it. They said their plea would be for Doctor Case's good name, pointing to the unusual circumstances in the case to support their contention that Mrs. Leland is "unbalanced."

A lawyer representing Mr. Leland, the divorced husband, was to argue a motion to dismiss the appeal.

EVENING GLOW

By Hal Cochran—

Let the logs crackle and let the flames roar. Images form in the blaze. Give me a fireplace; a spot on the floor, and let me drift off in a daze.

Spirit of longing is holding me tight. Would that my mind rest at ease. I can find comfort in flames flaring bright. All by myself, if you please.

Warmth of the fireplace is soothing and kind, letting me really relax. Dreamily gazing and resting my mind. That's how such restlessness acts.

Worry can wait while I seek for the cure that lets you start over again. Any old fireplace can easily lure the worn out and tired type of men.

Problems and troubles are waiting their turn, but surely I'll face them somehow, if only they'll let my old dream place burn, and simply not bother me now.

FASHION HINTS—

A Season of Color.
There is surprisingly little black used this year even for day wear. Very dark green, navy blue, red and the tan shades have quite overshadowed it.

Very Practical Too.
One of the most popular combinations of the season is the velvet skirt and the jumper of metal cloth or of metal brocade shot with brilliant colors.

Velvet Ribbon Used.
Velvet ribbon is seen as a trimming on all types of frock, but particularly on dance and dinner frocks.

Altar and Rosary Society Meeting

The Altar and Rosary Society sewing club members were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Anna Doyle Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Paul Crabtree, Mrs. Charles Koch and Mrs. Dave Kelley as assisting hostesses. There was a large attendance of members. Some were engaged in sewing quilt blocks, and some in fancy work for the bazaar which will be held soon, the date to be announced later. Each member of the society is expected to donate something for this bazaar and the president, Mrs. Arnold, will be glad to receive the donations at any time now.

At the conclusion of the busy afternoon the hostesses served delicious refreshments and a happy social hour was enjoyed.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Oranges, cereal, thin cream, cream ed potatoes, broiled ham, crisp graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Cream of potato soup, croutons, open egg and lettuce sandwiches, grape sponge, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Broiled salmon steaks, parsley butter, scalloped potatoes, lima beans in cream, celery, jellied apples with whipped cream, rye bread, milk coffee.

One or two tablespoons grated cheese added to potato soup after serving increases its food value and improves the flavor. The hot soup melts the cheese just enough to make it easily digested and blend perfectly with the liquid.

Grape sponge is a dessert worth keeping in mind for winter use when bottled grape juice must take the place of fresh.

Grape Sponge.
One tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 3 cup sugar, 1 lemon, 1 cup grape juice, whites 2 eggs, few grains salt.

Cover gelatin with cold water and let stand ten minutes. Place over hot water and dissolve. Bring grape juice to the boiling point with sugar, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Add lemon juice and dissolved gelatin. Stir well and let stand until the mixture begins to thicken. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and fold into jelly mixture. Then beat until stiff enough to hold its shape. Chill and serve with boiled custard made with the yolks of the eggs.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

An attractive little woman in the early thirties, blue-eyed and rosy-cheeked, came to see me the other day and said:

"The United States government has ordered me and my twelve-year-old child to desert my husband. Must I go it?"

"No," I said, without hesitation—then.

But now I am not so sure. I have gone into facts. Here is this woman's story:

Her husband, an expert mechanic, after a long period of unemployment in his native land, came to America. He had no difficulty as he was within that country's "quota." Quota means the number of persons allowed to come to America from each foreign land each year.

But when the wife's turn came she was told that the quota was full and that she and her twelve-year-old boy could not be accepted by America.

"But," said the authorities, "since your husband has been accepted we will permit you and your son to enter the United States for a visit with him."

The husband, the wife and the boy have been together for six months.

The husband has obtained profitable employment, the child is in school and they have a comfortable home and would be happy except—

The other day an immigration officer called at their little home, told the wife that her visit must now come to an end and that she with her son must return to their native land. But the husband, it was explained, need not go as he was regularly entered, whereas the wife and the child were permitted to come only as visitors.

plans and was very much surprised when the friends called.

The evening was spent in playing five hundred. Miss Laferne Richardson winning the first prize, while Miss Beatrice Stevens received second prize. At the close of the evening's pleasure Mrs. Lottie Horton served tempting refreshments, after which the guests presented the guest of honor with a set of salad plates, which were accepted with a few words of happy appreciation.

Pleasant Meeting Of Sunshine Class

Anniversary plans were a prominent feature of the business at the Sunshine Class meeting held last evening in the parlors of St. Paul's Lutheran church. Over forty were present. Preparations for the Thirty-fifth Anniversary of the class under its present teacher, Mrs. Mary L. Kay, have been under way for a year. The big group picture with over two hundred faces is nearly ready for use and a committee consisting of Mrs. Bertha Morgan, Mrs. Jennie Rees and Mrs. Carrie Bremer was appointed to arrange for supplying all class members who wish the photo. Special anniversary work will cover several months, but it was decided last evening that the celebration itself should occupy only the regular meeting night next February.

At the next class meeting, the third Thursday evening of November, there will be election of officers. Another special feature will be the forming of a study class for personal workers and discussion of Bible topics.

During the social hour, Misses Dorothy Randall and Cecile Barron played two piano duets, "Crimson

Now this family faces this situation:

If the family is to remain intact the husband and rather must quit his job and return with his family to their native country again to face unemployment and probably destitution.

If the husband remains here at his work his wife and son will be torn from him and made to return to their native country, putting upon him the double expense of maintaining two homes and bringing to all three the unhappiness that comes from separation.

That the separation would be a long one is indicated by the fact that the number of persons applying for the privilege of entering America from their country is already two or three times in excess of the quota.

Now I haven't a word to say in criticism of the immigration laws. Whether they are good or whether they are bad only time can tell. At best any sort of immigration restriction is more or less of an experiment. But from a study of the case described in the foregoing this is certainly true, that no married man should be permitted to enter the United States unless it is possible for him to bring his family with him.

The wife's place is at her husband's side. The wisdom of the ages is in that old saying. But how is a wife to be at her husband's side when the law sets him on one side of the Atlantic and her on the other?

Ideal Club in Pleasant Meeting

The Ideal Club met with Mrs. L. W. Miller Wednesday afternoon. Roll call was responded to by relating vacation experiences which proved to be varied and of much interest to all. The paper of the afternoon was a resume of the work of Lorado Taft, telling how he was inspired to produce his various works of art. The paper was not only interesting but very instructive. It was selected by Mrs. Fred Wahnke and read by Mrs. Henry Leydig. The current events presented by Miss Elizabeth Hiller were very good. The hostess served delicious refreshments during the social hour. The members are looking forward to a pleasant and profitable year.

Happy Surprise Wednesday Evening

Wednesday evening some girl friends gathered at the home of Mrs. George Horton to assist her in celebrating her birthday anniversary. Mrs. Horton was unaware of the Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames Florence Whitish, Grace Gerdies, Carrie Bremer, Lida Atkins, Martha Shippert, Mayme Hinds, Mary Fulle and Edith Slothower.

Mesdames Quick and Jackson Honored

Mrs. W. B. Richardson and Mrs. L. H. Duetsch delightfully entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Richardson for Mrs. Harry Quick and her mother, Mrs. Ida Jackson, who are soon to leave Dixon to spend the winter.

Mrs. Jackson plans to visit relatives in Denver, Col., and the Quick family will go to Florida.

About twenty neighbors enjoyed the afternoon in social chat and needlework.

During the afternoon Mrs. Bertie McKenney and Mrs. Thomson favored the guests with interesting readings, after which refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The neighbors on departing wished the guests of honor a pleasant winter and assured them that they would look forward with pleasure to their return in the spring.

FAIR SEX IS WEARING "SPECIES"

Paris, Oct. 16—(AP)—Dame fashion's last vanguard in this, Europe's "city of fashions," has been to set all the women to wearing spectacles. The pretty eyes of the 1925 Parisienne are no weaker than those of 1924, but the celluloid frames of the eye glasses made in any varieties of color, are novel and chic when they match her dress.

A Paris optician in the Rue Rivoli displays in his window a large tray filled with celluloid frames in mauve, green, blue, and in fact almost any conceivable hue that might be required to harmonize with mademoiselle's suit or frock.

Realized Neat Sum of Money

The ladies of the Christian church of Grand Detour are rejoicing over the success of the chicken supper they gave last evening. They made the neat sum of $28.25 and turned away twenty-five or thirty people as they did not have enough food for the enormous crowd attending. They had prepared for a large number of guests but did not expect quite so many.

Miss Schmucker Hostess Wednesday

Miss Mary Schmucker delightfully entertained a company of friends at a bridge luncheon Wednesday afternoon at her home. Her sister, Mrs. Henry Hellerer, assisting her in entertaining. The decorations in orange and black were of the Halloween season and were most artistic.

There were guests for three tables of bridge and a dainty three course luncheon was served.

Mrs. Paul Yack of Sterling was an out-of-town guest.

CAPITAL AND LABOR IN ITALY.

Italy tries a new way of handling the capital-labor problem, and a way which challenges world-wide attention. It is a policy of complete organization on both sides, with the government as arbiter.

There are in Italy a general confederation of industry and a general confederation of labor unions, representing respectively the employers and the workers. Each is to be encouraged in perfecting and completing its organization. Each then is to recognize the other as the sole body through which it will deal in all questions affecting wages, employment and general working conditions.

"The fascists hold," says a Rome dispatch, "that the state has the indisputable right of tutelage over both capital and labor, to see that both get a square deal. This, they believe, will result in greater and more economical production, from which the whole nation, including the workmen, will benefit."

This policy seeks to get rid of the old idea that capital and labor are necessarily antagonistic. It dodges the socialist doctrine of a "class war" by making each side see how helpless it is without the other. It substitutes for industrial warfare peaceful negotiation. It holds up the ideal of co-operation between labor and capital as the only possible one in modern industry.

It might be said that industrial development almost everywhere seems to be toward such an ideal, especially in America. But in most countries it moves slowly. The Italian government is trying, at one bold stroke, to accomplish what otherwise, at best, might take many years of industrial evolution.

In practically every industrial dispute there is a deadlock between capital and labor. Success of the Italian experiment depends on the success of the government as arbitrator in making such fair and equitable decisions as each side will accept.

COLLEGE PARENTS.

Professor Holmes of the University of California, studying 42,000 families, finds that college graduates have fewer children than other people. That fact is not news, but the ratio he discovered is. He says the college couples have only one-fourth as many children as an equal number of other parents.

This is unfortunate, but natural. College graduates marry later in life than other people—necessarily so in the case of the learned professions which keep a man studying and struggling for a start years after the non-collegian is earning a livelihood and raising a family. Moreover, the more people are educated, the less they desire a large family. This is seldom because they do not like children. It is because they realize their big responsibilities and want to give every child the best possible training, and believe that they can not do justice to more than two or three. They feel the claims of quality rather than quantity. And it must be admitted that they do usually take excellent care of their own children and give them a good start in life.

Another thing that makes the situation less serious than some anti-race-suicide fans may represent it: These figures are for families where both parents are college-bred, and such families are comparatively few. Most college men, Professor Holmes finds, marry high school girls, who have more children than college girls.

SACRIFICING.

You can not have the utmost possible of one thing without sacrificing something else.

That is the reason why the steamship Lexington, the new airplane carrier of the navy, is the swiftest big ship, armed or unarmed, afloat. The Lexington was started as a big cruiser, and then, under the Washington Conference agreement, transformed into a plane carrier.

As such, it does not have to be heavily armored, nor to carry heavy guns and emplacements. The extra weight can go into engines and driving power.

The Lexington does not fight with guns, and can run away from vessels that do fight with them, or can be defended by other such vessels.

A RADIO MYSTERY.

A recent radio questionnaire in Chicago showed that 50 percent more of the people answering wanted classical music than wanted jazz. The second choice was opera. After that came jazz and old-time songs, with an equal demand for each.

Similar questionnaires last year in New York and other important radio centers brought about the same results. There doesn't seem to be any question about what kind of music the public prefers to hear.

But you'd never suspect this from listening to the stuff coming through the air. Night after night, station after station fills the ether with jazz noises just the same. And jazz costs more, too, since broadcasters have to pay the composers.

Two prehistoric skeletons more than eighty feet in length, believed to have stood forty feet high, have been found during excavation for a railroad in Washington. It is well that they were not found in Tennessee.

Even the most pessimistic reports on prohibition enforcement all concede that the conditions the first year of prohibition, and perhaps the second, were "good." That is, prohibition was fairly well enforced, and it turned out, when enforced, to be a good thing for the people.

Is this not an encouraging example for the policy of "attacking at the source?"

There were just as many thirsty people the first year of prohibition as the fifth, and there were just as many lawless persons willing to peddle booze to them. The difference was the supply.

Retail bootlegging could spring up over night, and did. Wholesale suppliers had to wait on capitalized organizations. Until there were wholesalers to supply them, the petty bootleggers were unable to do much.

And if the wholesale supply can now be curtailed, the retail bootlegging will again be negligible. That is a matter of profits.

Men may buy booze from appetite or smart-Aleckness and may peddle it from recklessness, or because they have no other job, but men go into the wholesale smuggling or moonshining business only for profit.

Take that away and you do not need to reform them. They quit. Then the small bootlegger with his home-made moonshine is soon out of job.

Analysis of "Crime Waves"

All the analyses of the "crime wave" emphasize one thing which abundantly justifies the restrictive policy of the new immigration law.

The critics explain that it is impossible to make the same appeal to community sentiment in this country as in others, because we are so many sorts of people that whatever seems axiomatically right to one group of us seems as axiomatically wrong to other groups.

We are not moved by the scorn of our neighbors, because many of them would praise us for the very things that others condemn.

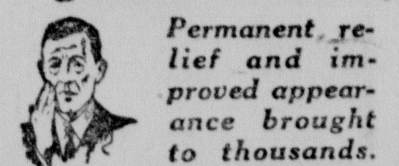

A homogeneous group, even of savages, imposes the common will without law because there is a common will. This force of public sentiment must do most of the law-enforcing, even in the most advanced communities. In America, where there are so many public sentiments, this force is weakened.

If this is the case, it means that it was high time we put a stop to the wholesale coming of new people until those already here have had time to merge into a more homogeneous people.

That happened long ago, in the countries from which our immigrants come. It is necessary for them to wait until it happens here.

And that means until a whole generation has grown up, attending the same schools, playing the same games together, marrying and giving in marriage, and working together.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

"We'll carry your cake for you, Mrs. Muskrat," one gazookums was saying.

"Good morning Mrs. Muskrat," said Nancy.

"Good morning, Nancy," said Mrs. Muskrat. "It's a fine morning this morning."

"It certainly is, Mrs. Muskrat," said Nancy. "And as you appear to be all dressed up to go somewhere, I am glad that the weather is nice."

"Yes," said Mrs. Muskrat happily. "It is my sister's birthday, and I am taking her a cake. It's a certain kind of cake that she is very fond of and I bake her one once a year."

"Where does your sister live?" asked Nancy.

"Down the creek about a mile," said Mrs. Muskrat.

"That's pretty far to be carrying a cake," said Nancy. "Couldn't Markie take you in his car?"

"What!" almost shrieked Mrs. Muskrat. "Trust my life to that washbottle thing that he calls an automobile! No, ma'am! Not me! I shouldn't have a tooth left, it shakes so."

"And as for getting in, my nice white starched dress would certainly be ruined. There is scarcely room in it for one—let alone two."

"He could take your cake, anyway," I should think," said Nancy. "It looks pretty big and heavy to carry so far."

"It isn't heavy. It is quite light," announced Mrs. Muskrat indignantly. "I never make heavy cakes. But there! If I stand here talking any longer, my sister's birthday will be over and I won't need to go at all."

"Good-bye," said Nancy.

"Good-bye," said Mrs. Muskrat.

"Good-bye," called Nick from the doorway of the garage where he was mending a tire.

Away went Mrs. Muskrat toward the creek, but she hadn't been gone two minutes when Markie came along in his funny queer little home made car.

"Did you see Mother?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes," said Nancy. "She went down to your aunt's house on the creek. Why—is anything the matter in politics and business."

Then, with common loyalties, coming away from this atmosphere of ridiculous fear, I have often heard of women dreading the hours when they will bring a child in to the world, but I never heard of a man so foolish, did you?

You see, Walter is an only child whose mother died when he was born and so he has had this complex ever since he was old enough to realize that his mother gave her life for him. He seems to think that most women die at that time and although I point out to him that the world is still peopled with plenty of women and tell him to look around and see how many mothers of big families he knows, he will not be comforted. Perhaps if you come over and explain to him that you're still alive after the birth of two children, he will not worry any more.

I am so glad that Sally Atherton has gotten back. I know Jack is depending on her so much. I never particularly liked her personally but I cannot help admiring her efficiency and splendid independence. The shop is not doing so well as I could wish, principally because Walter will not let me pay any attention to it. I think you had better come over and give us the once over.

Of course, dear, if you have anything that really needs you at home, I don't want you to come to me, but I am in a kind of a quandary and I am sure you can help me out.

Lovingly yours,

RUTH.

baby comes. I will die. Of course, he hasn't said this to me in so many words, but he hardly leaves me for a moment and I catch him looking at me with the saddest expression on his face when he thinks I am not looking. The family physician makes a visit to me every morning. I would not mind this so much if the doctor didn't take himself so seriously, but I've gotten so I just dread his calls, particularly as I have a trained nurse in the house already and she tries to keep a chart of my doings. I am looked after and cared for until I'm on the verge of insanity.

And all the time, Leslie, I am perfectly well. I never felt better in my life. I know I could dance and enjoy myself and go about my business like a normal woman, but Walter will not hear of it. He won't even allow me to go to a moving picture show unless he knows that there is nothing in it that he thinks would excite me. I feel as if I was done up in cotton batting. I think if you would come over for a day or two I could make you an excuse for men customs, common ideals, we shall have something to which we may invite newcomers to "assimilate." Our present task is to assimilate ourselves.

Sob-Sister Sentimentality

The first by-products of scientific criminology was sob-sister sentimentality. If the criminal was in part the product of forces, physical, mental and social, and was not simply a wicked person, whom it was our duty to hate and punish, the natural conclusion seemed to be that we should treat him with more leniency than has been the custom of the vindictive past.

The old motives for severity being discredited, the severity itself seemed unjustified. But the further development of impersonal, unvindictive, unemotional scientific study of crime as a problem is tending to the opposite conclusion.

Chief of Police Vollmer of Berkeley, Calif., widely known as a scientific criminologist, in a recent address advocated life imprisonment for habitual criminals, not as a "punishment," but as the logical treatment of an incurable disease.

Not the magnitude of the crime, but the hopelessness of reform, designates certain classes of criminal repeaters for permanent segregation from society.

Our successor may even be able to diagnose them before they commit any serious crime at all. Anyhow, the merciful scientist would lock them up, permanently.

McINNIS IS GIVEN CREDIT FOR TURN IN WORLD SERIES

His Injection Into the Game Turned Pirates to Better Work

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 16—(AP)—The Pirates of Pittsburgh today are champions of the world, once again, after 16 long years and all of them are stars of magnitude, with the central planet carrying the grand old name of McInnis.

Great figures were many in the Pirates' epoch making drive that cut down even the mighty Walter Johnson at the last. Kild Cuyler's double won the deciding game after Kresg's relief hurling saved it, but the greatest guiding influence of all was that of the old first baseman of the old Athletics, a man who had played behind the superb Jack Coombs, the peerless Chief Bender and the remarkable Eddie Plank.

When McInnis went out to first base he took confidence with him. From then the Pirate team was reformed. The old head stationed at the first corner of that youthful infield worked marvels. There was nothing sensational about his play, but the youths soon learned that a throw in the general direction of first base was a putout. When trouble threatened there came the firm words of McInnis across the field of play. When a moundsman faltered, the first baseman was at his side, urging him on.

Was Pawn That Checked. Stuff cannot be considered the hero of Pittsburgh victory, but he was the pawn that McKechnie moved in the nick of time when all other pieces had failed—the pawn that checked.

Washington's games were won by pitching; Pittsburgh by hitting. The bats of the Pirates had been heralded as the most potent in the National game, but Johnson twice made them look like toothpicks. Their holders withdrew from the plate when the tall Kansan shot his fast one across. Johnson scored both his victories by remarkable mound work, the first of the series in Pittsburgh by 4-1, the second in Washington on Sunday, 4-0. Viv Aldridge won the second contest in Pittsburgh 3-2, sending the teams into the capital on even terms. Alex Ferguson and Fred Marberry, the Senators' great relief pitcher, accounted for the third contest, 4-3, which was followed by Johnson's second conquest. Aldridge came back for the Pirates on Monday and for the second time subdued them 6-3, the teams returning to Pittsburgh with Washington having a one game advantage.

Pirates Recovered Bats. It was in the final game in Washington that the Pirates made a sensational stand when baseball followers outside of Pittsburgh viewed the series as all but over. Aldridge pitched extremely well and his mates supported him with their bats, recovering the prowess at the plate that had been theirs during the National League campaign. It was in that contest that McInnis entered the lineup.

Back at home the Pirates sent Kresmer after the game that would tie and he obtained it when Eddie Moore shot a home run over the far left field wall to break a 2-2 deadlock.

So hey came to the final struggle, but rain intervened for a day, leaving it a certainty that Johnson and Aldridge, the winning pitchers of the series, would fight it out for honors. They started the battle yesterday on as poor a day for good baseball as could be imagined. Rain pelted down at intervals, clouds of smoke carried across the playing field and at times electric lights were needed to make plain the play to the spectators. It proved an epic tussle, but far from what had been prophesied.

Lead Looked Good.

Before the first inning had ended Aldridge was back on the bench, a disgruntled figure and Washington had gained a four run lead. It seemed to be all over with Johnson, backed by darkness, whizzing balls at the batters. But Carey, a second man up for the Pirates, slashed a double into center to introduce the Pirate attack. That was all for the time being, for Johnson, working easily, struck out Cuyler and Barnhart on six pitched balls. The second inning went by without note, but in the third Johnny Morrison who had replaced Aldridge, dropped a fly safely in center and went all the way around on Moore's smash to the left field screen. Carey scored Moore with a drive to center and scored on Barnhart's safety in the same territory.

Beginning of Attack. That was the real beginning of the Pirate offensive, which endured and finally won success through Cuyler's double into the canvas off the right field line, scoring two runs in the eighth for the victory.

Two great failures stood out in the series—Roger Peckinpaugh, Washington shortstop and Stanley Coveleskie, the Senator pitcher who won three games from Brooklyn as a member of the Cleveland staff in the world's series of 1920.

Peck recently voted the most valuable player to his team in the American League, broke all records for errors, having eight misplays charged against him. In the 1921 classic, playing for the Yanks, he allowed a Giant hit to trickle through his legs in the deciding game, the bobble scoring the winning run.

Covey, with just the sort of delivery that should conquer the Pirates, was knocked out of two games.

Many Records Fell in Series Just Completed

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 16—(AP)—Records were broken thick and fast in the Pirates world's series battle with Washington.

The most notable were in home run hitting, where individual as well as team marks went into the discard before the slugging led by Goose Goslin and Joe Harris of the Senators, each of whom slammed out three circuit blows to tie the individual record for a single series.

Goslin set an all series mark for himself by increasing his total to six for two years, displacing the previous mark of four held by Babe Ruth.

Peck's homer yesterday increased the two club total to 12, eclipsing the former record of ten, set by the Yanks and Giants in 1923 while Washington's eight round trippers also set up a new club standard for a single series.

Peck's startling total of eight errors was the most tragic new record, his string of misplays removing the names of Hans Wagner and Joe Sewell from the record books in this respect. The latter pair each had registered six errors in a series.

Other new marks were: Twelve one base hits by Sam Rice, breaking mark of nine set by J. Sebring of Pittsburgh in 1903 and equalled later by four others.

Max Carey hit three times by pitcher setting new record, also tying record, of four hits in single game set by Tommy Leach in 1903 and equalled later by dozen others.

Stan Harris accepting 13 chances in field in fourth game, equaling record made by Claude Ritchey of Pittsburgh in 1903.

RAIN PROBABLE OVER "BIG TEN" FIELDS SATURDAY

Weather Conditions in Mid-West May Change Course of Games

Chicago, Oct. 16—(AP)—Threatening clouds are moving today over the football sky bringing probable boosts or blasts to title hopes of midwest teams.

Toward the east go 35 hopefuls of the pessimistic Knute Rockne to do annual combat in the Notre Dame-Army classic in the Yankee Stadium. Rockne expects to loose, but his pteges who have been pointing for the game since they started practice, are geared to produce their best efforts.

From the east come Syracuse to Indiana and Columbia to Ohio State, neither game having a bearing on the Western Conference standings.

A strong Michigan disturbance is invading the lair of the Badgers, carrying its full strength to sustain its hold on the conference pinnacle. The game is Wisconsin's Big Ten opener and Coach Little is hopeful of cheering the old grads gathered for the homecoming, with a favorable showing if not a win.

The Illinois whirlwind, Red Grange, again his 1924 self, anticipates an upheaval in meeting Iowa's torando Nick Kutsch, aspiring "point a minute" triple threat. With Grange is his old teammate Britton, whose interference aided him in his long gains last year and who previously has been ineligible to play in a conference game. Smith, Iowa end, is out with injuries.

Local disturbances in the football forecast tomorrow for Chicago, where the Maroons and Northwestern engage in civil strife. The Purple has ready a repertoire of mixed air and ground plays, centering about "Moon" Baker Gustafson, Lewis and White, backs.

Of minor consequence, are the meetings of Minnesota and Wabash, which upset Purdue and Purdue and its neighbor, Rose Poly.

HARRIS DENIES SENTIMENT HAD PART IN PLANS

Considers Ban Johnson Statement Reflection on "Train"

Washington, Oct. 16—(AP)—Denying that he had pitched Walter Johnson in the final world series game at Pittsburgh yesterday for "sentimental reasons," Bucky Harris, manager of the Washington Senators, declared on his return here early today that he considered the criticism of his pitching selection by President Ban Johnson of the American League as a "reflection" on the Washington pitcher.

Harris' statement was made in a reply to a telegram sent him by Johnson from Chicago in which the league president tempered his congratulations for a "game fight" with the assertion that Washington lost the series "because of sentimental reasons" in pitching Johnson.

"Sentiment played absolutely no part in my decision to pitch Johnson," Harris declared in his statement. "He pitched wonderful ball. I regard it as a reflection on Walter Johnson to have such a thing said of him. President Johnson's remarks, if his telegram has been correctly quoted, are gratuitous and would have been better left unsaid."

THE LIMITED MAIL

by ELMER E. VANCE
Novel by William Basil Courtney

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros.
"THE LIMITED MAIL" by Monte Blue, is a dramatization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Wilson, the freight engineer, has gone with Caroline Dale on a picnic in the woods and fields near Crater City. Bob makes no secret of his love and the girl shows him that his tender feelings are reciprocated. When he insists there is something in his past life about which he should tell her, Caroline declares she is unwilling to hear any confession. Suddenly the two are startled by the blast of an automobile horn, blown evidently at an alarm signal.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

Caroline, in terror, shrank into the arms of Bob, who said excitedly: "That's the police patrol from town or I miss my guess! You know, they're transferring prisoners at the rate of a single carload a day from the old state jail to the new penitentiary up the line. There's been a prison coach attached to the westbound limited each night for several nights past. One was laid up in the yards this morning. I wonder—"

They exchanged significant looks, while the siren continued to draw closer and despoil the quiet mountain glen with its raucous warning. Caroline clung even closer to Bob, an unwarlike claim for a mate's protection; and Bob, thrilling to the warm contact of her young body, which quivered against him as a captive bird might in a man's clenched fist, felt a vast possessiveness—felt that he could successfully fight off a whole carload of escaped desperadoes, if necessary, to save her.

He shot an arm around her shoulder and stood alertly with his other fist doubled and ready when there came a crashing in the bushes nearby, and loud voices. Three uniformed policemen, with sawed off shotguns, broke through and confronted them breathlessly.

"Seen anyone—a man in convict stripes?"

"No," said Bob calmly. "Why what's the matter?"

"Matter enough if you stumbled into him!" said one cop in tones that denoted respect for the reputation of his quarry. "The most dangerous and vicious criminal who's ever been in the State bullpen escaped from the transfer car. We've traced him to this vicinity. I'd advise you, my friend, first of all to clear out of this neighborhood, and secondly to hold your peace if you should bump into him. He's bad medicine at any time—but by now he's hungry, desperate—and a damn sight more dangerous than a dozen catamounts!"

The police officers scoured on. Caroline, upset and with nerves overwrought from the incessant shrieking of the siren, insisted on starting down from the hill at once; the picnic mood was gone from her for the time being. Bob, though assuring her that it was silly to be alarmed, humored her.

They had gone but a short distance down the shrub-matted cliff path, though the siren and the shouting of the skirmishing policemen were already fainter as they searched out a new section on the wooded summit above, when like a weird and menacing jack-in-the-box a striped and shackled figure arose from a bush and stood leering in their path.

"Bob Wilson, take me oath if it ain't—an' quite respectable looking!" Bob could not restrain a horrified recoil from the shock of recognition.

"Ain't!"

"You win, but guess it!" Caroline, meanwhile, a suffled scream dissolving in her throat as she heard the familiarity and equality in the greeting of this vicious-looking criminal for Bob—her Bob—felt a sick bewilderment and disgust; it must be true, then, that there was something sordid and bad in Bob's past when its associations had been so base and unlovely.

Bob, looking at her in that tense, soul-stripping moment, read the concrete suspicions and distrust dawning in her eyes, and felt a rush of stubbornness at the injustice of Fate that was robbing him of the carefully hoarded strength of his exile. First Jane—now Spike. Spike, who had read—that poster!

Bob stared at Spike again, dully curious. "I want yuh to help me, see growled Spike. "Hide me till the lousie bulls git outen here—" The sounds of the pursuing party seemed to be growing nearer again. This fact, coupled with Bob's hesitation, inflamed Spike, who shook his steel club threateningly under Bob's white face.

"Hide me, Wilson—or I'll tell de lady friend about dat poster—" Further hesitation on Bob's part; then, wetting his lips, he said even-ly: "Tell and be damned to you!"

The beast in Spike raged at this defiance. He leaped close to Caroline before Bob, taken off his guard, could interfere—tore her dress from her shoulder with his human hand and set the rapier point of his steel hand against her white breast.

"Promise you'll help me, or I'll rip her open!" he shrieked red-eyed, at Bob.

Caroline was frozen with terror, in her tracks—mouth open and eyes staring as she looked at and shrank from the prick of the deadly claw. Bob, paralyzed, looked on in terror not less than her own.

But his return to full possession of his faculties, under the lash of tragic necessity, was lightning fast. He leaped forward and struck out simultaneously. His left fist reached its mark on Spike's jaw at almost the precise instant that his right hand, with athletic continuity of motion, pushed Caroline backwards out of harmful contact with the falling desperado's spike.

Spike was not knocked out. He had barely touched the ground before with a tigerish squirm he flung his muscular leg around in such a way that it snipped Bob's legs from under him, crumpling him to the ground beside Spike, who came to instant grips with him.

Bob knew Spike's method of old. He remembered the horror that he had been filled with upon the occasion of his first meeting with Spike, when he had reflected upon the possibilities of that steel claw as a weapon. Now, therefore, he instinctively grabbed for the spike. And not a moment too soon, for it came within a hair of slithering his throat.

The fight became a thrashing melee. Spike fought with the insane courage and cruelty of a maddened dog; Bob remained chiefly on the defensive, guarding his eyes, his throat, his heart from frantic jabbing of the steel hand. Now and again, Bob was able to get in a telling smash against Spike's face. But Spike met Bob on terms of equal strength, and had the advantages of his lightning claw and of experience in the dirtier points of rough and tumbling fighting, gained in many a low barroom and rough trackside camp.

Bob soon realized that he was face to face with a fight for his life. Caroline, with a suddenly discovered courage standing her in good stead as she witnessed the fight of her man for his very life, moved back and forth with the thrashing bodies as they rolled and tumbled around, gouging up the rocky turf.

At every chance she seized Spike, disregarding the back lashes of his flailing steel hand, and tried to pull him away from Bob—giving Bob every aid and advantage possible to enable him to get in a vital blow. She was so engaged when several members of the police posse rushed into the scene and made short work of jerking Spike to his feet, handcuffing him, and punching him into subjection under the threat of their numerously shortened shotguns.

Bob got to his feet unsteadily. "You win, but it's my turn next time!" snarled Spike over his shoulder. "Hell, you're wanted by the police yourself—"

CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN

I think when I read that sweet story of old,

When Jesus was here among men, How He called little children as lambs to His flock;

I should like to have been with them then.

I wish that His hands had been placed on my head,

That His arms had been thrown around me;

The One who Forgot

By RUBY M. AYRES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PETER LYSTER lost his memory from a shock in France. Upon his return to London he fails to recognize.

NAN MARRABY, the girl to whom he is betrothed, Nan broken-hearted, has returned home to care for her three motherless stepbrothers. She fails to heed the advice of her friend.

JOAN ENDICOTT, that she encourage the love of Peter's friend and fellow officer.

JOHN ARNOTT, with whom Peter is resting at the home of Arnott's widowed sister, who is on the point of accepting his offer of marriage in order to settle her future once for all and protect her father from threatened financial embarrassment.

NAN MARRABY, a money lender, who has told that Peter is his debtor, she is on the point of accepting his offer of marriage in order to settle her future once for all and protect her father from threatened financial embarrassment.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

NAN felt as if she were just a mechanical figure forcing herself to walk on, walk on, and not give way to the overpowering sense of weakness that seized her.

Then the mist lifted, and out of the silence she heard herself saying politely:

"Really! How very interesting!"

"One hears so much of these hasty war weddings nowadays," Miss Dudeney went on. "I don't know that I agree with them myself. As a matter of fact, I believe the glamor of the uniform and the romance of parting is more than half responsible for such marriages. But . . . well—people must do as they like."

"Yes," said Nan, stiffly, "people must do as they like."

She echoed the elder woman's words, parrot-like. Of course, it could not really be of Peter they were talking—it was some other man.

"And now do say you will come and help with the church decorations," Miss Dudeney said again, and Nan realized that she had reached the vicarage and had stopped at the gate. "As I told you, Mrs. Mears is coming, and her brother—perhaps you know Mr. Arnott?"

"Yes," said Nan. "And I darest say Mr. Lyster will come as well," Miss Dudeney went on. "They say he is devoted—perfectly devoted. Goodby, Miss MARRABY."

"Goodby," said Nan; she just touched the thin, cotton-gloved hand before she turned and walked back. So Peter was going to marry Doris Mears.

"I always knew it," Nan told herself, not realizing that she spoke the words aloud. "Somehow I think I always knew it," she said again hopelessly.

She wondered if Arnott had known it that morning he came over and asked if there could be any hope for a man who was not Peter; she wondered if it had been an attempt on his part to save her from pain and humiliation.

"It was kind of him, anyway," she thought, dreadingly; "very kind of him."

Of course, all the parish knew by this time of Peter's engagement; she felt as if they must all know, too, that he had once loved her, and that she was broken-hearted.

The thought stung her, she would take the only way out and marry Harley Sefton.

Nobody could be sorry for her then—Sefton was rich and sought after; he could give her money and everything she wanted. She wondered desperately if the things money could buy would deaden the pain in her heart.

She would have a good time—she would go about and see the world—she would make herself forget.

"After all, it's no worse than it would have been if Peter had been killed," she told herself; but she knew that it was, a thousand times worse.

"I wish I could die," she thought as she opened the little iron gate and walked up the garden path.

The front door stood open—the little maid was hovering in the hall.

"Please, miss, Mr. Sefton is here," "Oh, is he?" she said stupidly. Then she began to laugh.

She wondered if he knew of this dreadful thing that had come into her life.

She took the pins from her hat; she smoothed her rough hair; then she went on into the schoolroom.

Sefton stood by the fireplace. He was reading a paper, but he laid it down when she came in.

"Good evening!" he said. "Good evening!" Nan answered. She looked straight at him. He was not such a bad-looking man, she thought, and he was well dressed.

He looked amazed.

"If that's all you've got to say," she began.

"But it isn't." He came closer. "Nan, I've brought you a ring—at least, I've brought several for you to choose from."

He took some little cases from his pocket and put them down on the table.

Nan made no attempt to open them.

He waited a moment.

"Not interested?" he asked. He opened the snap of one case and showed her a magnificent half-hoop of diamonds. "Most women would go mad with delight over that," he said, with satisfaction.

"I don't care for diamonds," said Nan.

She was wondering what she should do with Peter's ring.

"I wish you would choose," she said again. "I would much rather you choose."

He gave a little exclamation of annoyance.

"What has happened to you?" he asked. "You seem to have lost all your spirit."

He caught her hand as she would have turned away.

"Don't you care a hang for me, Nan?" he asked roughly.

Her blue eyes met his; she gave a little shiver.

"No," she said. "You know I don't." She tried to free herself. "There isn't any need to pretend, is there?" she asked. "You don't care about me either, I know."

"Why do you think I want you then?"

She shook her head.

"I don't know—because you thought I should be hard to get, perhaps; some men are like that."

"I'm fond of you," he told her roughly. "I swear that I'm fond of you—I've never cared for anyone else in all my life."

"I have," said Nan, with a queer little laugh.

He flung away from her impatiently.

"It's that infernal fellow Lyster. . . . Why can't you forget him. I should have thought you would have more pride than to go crying for a man who has treated you as he has."

Make up your mind to forget him. "If I hadn't," said Nan quietly, "I shouldn't have said I would marry you, and now if you've quite done with me I should like to go and put the boys to bed."

"You think more of those little devils than you do of me," he said jealously.

She stood waiting with a sort of weary resignation; he had been right when he said that she seemed to have lost all her spirit; nothing he could say now seemed to have the power to rouse her.

He swept the little ring cases back into his pocket.

"I'm going," he said roughly. But he came back almost at once; he looked at her with a sort of angry abatement.

"I do anything for you, Nan—anything," he said.

He did not wait for her answer, and in another moment she heard the front door bang behind him.

"A great orchard of Adam's apple" was Broadway the other night, according to wise-cracking "Cap" Higgins, the NEA Service artist. The street whose favorite jest concerns the countrymen who gaze at tall buildings turned its faces skyward unanimously when an illuminated airplane swooped about advertising the international air races. Anyone who kept his eyes on normal level could see nothing but craning necks. But Broadway would not look up at a 10-story building, no indeed, nor at the stars.

—JAMES W. DEAN.

New York—There's no moral to this fable, unless it be in adding data to the record of feminine prowess.

Betting on horse races, as every child should know, is a favorite indoor sport in the metropolis. Through numerous office buildings the book-maker follows a daily route.

A new stenographer came to work
"Quitted 'eq pson uqqa pua zuppau" in one office where three or four of the men daily were doing out $2 lets. She was reserved and efficient, with quite the air of a "home body."

"I like that 'Bombay,'" she remarked one day when she saw the racing followers studying a form chart. The men smiled in tolerant indifference.

"The horse has good position, you'll notice, and is carrying only 98 pounds and hasn't won for three or four races," the girl continued in the style of a veteran. "I think they're saying him back to win."

And that day Bombay won.
Next time the bookmaker came around, the girl gave him $20 while the men for whom she was taking dictation and answering telephone put up their usual 2-spots. She won, and a couple of days later she vaged the entire pile on another winner. This time the bookie had to pay $40.

She and her sister in law are participating in the horse business, she explained to the respectful and welltamed male contingent, and the sister in law pays for tips from a regular handicapper. There is not an isolated case, though. The news stands sell hundreds of racing papers to women.

Of all the city's passing landmarks,
none will be endowed by its devotees with more of the golden aura of memory than "Booksellers' Row" on Fourth avenue just south of Union Square. For nearly thirty years this section has been the capital of the second hand book trade in the United States. There are 15 book shops in the space of two or three blocks, and each has several stalls and bargain tables on the pavement to solicit acquaintance from browsing pedestrians.
The wide sidewalks and leisurely traffic on Fourth avenue made an ideal eddy in the traffic current. But the sidewalks are to be narrowed at once to give more space for vehicles, and the bookshelves are to be scattered.
Another charge against the automobile!
